

I feel that my texts do a good job of explaining the feeling that each image gives me. Each image has a different meaning to me, so I chose to try and translate that meaning by using the words that I used. For example, for the one with the purple sky during a sunrise, this picture reminds me of all the beauty that there is on this planet, whether we see it every day or not. Another image that represents this well is the one of me golfing, simply due to the fact that golfing requires a high level of concentration that is hard to achieve throughout a round. I chose to sequence my pictures in a similar way in the flow of a day, starting with a sunrise and finishing off with the national anthem before a Sunday night football game. I also chose to use my pictures of my dogs to represent the actions that I took during the day before the football game.
